NAVY RESCHEDULES LOCAL E-4 NAVY-WIDE ADVANCEMENT EXAMS POSTPONED BY HURRICANE OPHELIA

NORFOLK, VA.—The Navy announced today that advancement examinations, postponed earlier this month because of Hurricane Ophelia, have been rescheduled.

According to the Commanding Officer, Personnel Support Activity Atlantic, Captain Jane Barclift, the E-4 advancement exam for Sailors assigned to shore commands at all Hampton Roads bases will take place Oct. 27. Sailors should check with their commands to ensure they know the correct time to report, as well as the location where the exam will be held.

The exams, originally scheduled for September 15, were postponed by the Navy when weather related to Hurricane Ophelia was forecast to affect Hampton Roads. Thousands of Sailors were scheduled to take the biannual test which as part of the advancement process. Operations at area Navy installations were not affected by the storm.
